Subject: Recognizing the Importance of Mental Health and Women's Health

Preheader: Here, Policy Matters. Learn the latest from UPMC's Government Affairs team.

This month, we recognize two crucial health topics that have widespread impact in our society: Mental Health Awareness Month and Women's Health Month.

Since 1949, Mental Health Awareness Month has driven awareness, reduced stigma, and advocated for mental health and wellness for all. The 2025 national theme is "Turn Awareness into Action." It is a powerful call to move beyond conversations and take meaningful steps toward improving mental health outcomes.

May is also Women's Health Month, signaling a call to action for women to prioritize their mental, physical, and emotional well-being. This year's theme is "Empowering Women, Cultivating Health: Celebrating Voices, Wellness, and Resilience." It seeks to encourage women to take charge of their health journeys.

Both of these themes emphasize the importance of community engagement, advocacy, education, and recognizing that lasting change happens when individuals, organizations, and entire communities work together to support holistic well-being.

This edition of Policy Matters highlights efforts across the UPMC footprint to support women's health and improve access to mental health resources.

Advocacy and Expanding Access

Universal Postpartum Depression Screenings, Faster Mental Health Referrals to Support Pennsylvania Mothers

Pennsylvania Gov. Josh Shapiro's proposed budget earmarks $5 million for addressing maternal health concerns. It includes a directive for the Pennsylvania Department of Health to train health care providers to identify postpartum depression and anxiety faster and quickly connect those women to mental health care and resources. UPMC Magee-Womens Hospital supports this initiative, emphasizing the importance of early screenings and connecting mothers to specialized behavioral health services.

PITT STUDY MAKES NEW INSIGHTS INTO THE ORIGINS OF OVARIAN CANCER —

Researchers at the University of Pittsburgh have identified a novel trigger of a deadly form of ovarian cancer: a subset of progenitor cells that reside in fallopian tube supportive tissue, or stroma.

The discovery of these high-risk cells could pave the way for better approaches to prevent and detect high-grade serous ovarian cancer. High-grade serous ovarian cancer is the most common form of ovarian cancer, which kills more than 12,000 women in the U.S. each year. The researchers described their findings in a study published in Cancer Discovery.
